

Multiple Intelligences Chart

How do you ensure all of your participants' intelligences are being tapped? Here is a list of activities that speak to each intelligence. Use them as thought starters for activities that may be a better fit for your content.

Linguistic-Verbal

- choral speaking
- declarizing
- storytelling
- retelling
- speaking
- debating
- presenting
- reading aloud
- dramatizing
- book making
- nonfiction reading
- researching
- listening
- process writing
- writing journals

Logical-Mathematical

- problem solving
- measuring
- coding
- sequencing
- critical thinking
- predicting
- playing logic games
- collecting data
- experimenting
- solving puzzles
- classifying
- using manipulatives (soft toys like ball, etc.)
- learning the scientific model
- using money
- using geometry

Spatial-Visual

- graphing
- photographing
- making visual metaphors
- making visual analogies
- mapping stories
- making 3D projects
- painting
- illustrating
- using charts
- using organizers
- visualizing
- sketching
- patterning
- visual puzzles

Bodily-Kinesthetic

- hands on experiments
- activities
- changing room arrangement
- creative movement
- going on field trips
- physical education activities
- crafts
- dramatizing
- using cooperative groups
- dancing

Musical

- humming
- rapping
- playing background music
- patterns
- form
- playing instruments
- tapping out poetic rhythms
- rhyming
- singing

Interpersonal

- classroom parties
- peer editing
- cooperative learning
- sharing
- group work
- forming clubs
- peer teaching
- social awareness
- conflict mediation
- discussing
- cross generation tutoring/coaching
- study group
- brainstorming

Intrapersonal

- personal response
- individual study
- personal goal setting
- individual projects
- journal log keeping
- personal choice in projects
- independent reading

Naturalistic

- reading outside
- cloud watching
- identifying insects or plants
- building habitats
- using a microscope
- dissecting
- going on a nature walk
- build a garden
- studying the stars
- bird watching
- collecting rocks
- making bird feeders
- visiting a zoo